Statistics Researcher

London, United Kingdom

Salary: £27,500 per annum
Salary Band: A3
Contract Type: Permanent
Hours: Full Time

The Role

This post is in the Social & General Statistics section which provides briefing on statistics relating to a wide range of topics, including: education, energy, transport, health, housing, agriculture, crime, elections, benefits and pensions and population. The section provides briefing on these subjects for the UK and other countries.

The Successful applicant will acquire responsibility for a growing portfolio of subjects during their training period, and will also be expected to deal with work in other subject areas depending on demands and topicality of issues. This work will include oral and written briefings for MPs and their staff, supporting them across the full range of their parliamentary duties, and producing material for publication online and in print.

The Person

The successful candidate will have the following skills/experience:

- Knowledge of statistics and current affairs
- Research and analytical skills
- The ability to produce clear and accurate oral and written work in areas which can be technical. This must be appropriate to the needs of its user, whether specialist or non-specialist.
- Candidates should have a first class or upper second class honours degree, in relevant subject including statistics module(s), or a relevant postgraduate qualification.

Benefits

Annual leave starting at 28 days pro rata

Interest-free season ticket loan

Child care voucher scheme

Discounted membership of the in-house gym

All applications must be submitted on a House of Commons application form

More information on the role can be found on our website: https://houseofcommons-careers.engageats.co.uk/

Closing date: midnight on 08/11/2016