THATCHAM, The Motor Insurance Repair Research Centre has a reputation for integrity, quality, passion and innovation. We provide the automotive and insurance industries with essential and valuable commercial information through research and development, consultancy, training and publishing services with the continuing goal of driving down the cost of insurance claims.

We are seeking an Analyst Statistician to continuously develop and update our forecasting model(s) to represent the latest in research and expertise from within Thatcham and from external sources whilst working closely with insurer members to produce relevant output.

The ideal candidate will have the following:

- Masters or Doctoral degree, plus additional research/applied experience
- The ability to research, analyse and interpret data
- A logical approach to problem solving
- Excellent spoken, written and presentation communication skills, including the ability to explain complex information
- Excellent computer skills, particularly in manipulation and processing of data
- The ability to pay attention to detail, but also see the bigger picture
- The ability to work independently on tasks, but within a context of close team work to ensure that tasks/projects fit together into the modelling
- High level of understanding about financial markets and business, particularly of motor insurance would be an advantage

We welcome applicants who have a track record of experience in motor insurance, particularly those with claims or actuarial experience. Candidates with motor accident reconstruction experience would also be considered.

Typical tasks would include the analysis of statistics (for example claims data). Use of computers to build statistical forecast models of future trends based on different scenarios and assessment of the associated risks. Explaining findings to managers or external stakeholders. Continuous research and update of modelling to integrate latest findings and methodologies.
